PUBLIC LIBRARY.

REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES.

To the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Concord:

The comprehensive report of the librarian of the Public Library, which is herewith submitted, renders it unnecessary for the trustees to attempt to supplement it by extended remarks. All friends of the library will find it an interesting document.

R. E. WALKER,
President Board of Trustees.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN FOR 1911.

To the Board of Trustees of the Concord Public Library:

GENTLEMEN,—At the dedication of the New Hampshire Historical Society's beautiful building, which now queens it over our civic square, there was a good deal said concerning the desirability of weeding libraries: that which President Eliot remarked years ago about dead books and which was repeated in emphasized form recently by Lord Rosebery at Glasgow, was reiterated by the speakers here in Concord on November 23.

All these eminent authorities would feel that this Public Library could not be excelled as a weeder, for our crowded quarters oblige us to discard old books with one hand while we accession new ones with the other. Statistics for 1911 verify this statement, we having made a net gain of less than 400 volumes although we bought 724.

At this rate the library will make progress slowly toward an imposing total figure, but it will contain an exceptionally small amount of out-grown material, and I shall be envied by those librarians whose trustees have not your enlightened views and who therefore are required to keep in their stackrooms everything which was ever there, even if it be a twenty-year-old work on electricity, a treatise on agriculture as practiced in the '50's, or a theological pamphlet combatting tenets no longer held.

It seems to me false modesty never to presume to discard a book; some dusty tomes may be made to circulate if they are placed in front of the delivery desk where they will catch the borrower's eye, but surely there are scores of novels and out-of-date technical books which are not worth this attempt to galvanize them into life.

I feel strongly that residents of a city or state should not be taxed to pay for the housing and care of much of the stuff that is now in libraries; before these edifices beg for enlargement let them gain space by discarding; and also let inter-library loans prevent the present duplication of material. I must say that when a great Chicago library sent for our 1910 report which I purposely had not unloaded upon it, I did not feel gratified, but rather exasperated in behalf of those Chicagoans who, if their library does not alter its policy, may be called upon to add a wing, and who would prefer to send here for our report, if it were wanted—which it never would be.

Yet in spite of our culling, from both necessity and conviction, it became necessary the past year to create new accommodations for our monthly purchases, and in July the gallery voted at your last annual meeting was constructed around our catalogue room; many think the interior of the library has gained in looks as well as in convenience by its introduction. This gallery enabled us to fill with shelving what had hitherto been unavailable wall space, and thither we have moved our sets of bound magazines; their transference has left the balcony free to catch the overflow of reference work, or rather to add stimulus to it, for Miss Brown, in charge thereof, says that old and young showed instant appreciation of the pleasant new study place and increased their research to such a degree that she waited on 1,746 inquirers from the third week in September to December 31. During the month just passed, 570 have had recourse to the reference room.

This enjoyment of our one slightly enlarged facility indicates that a twentieth century library, with modern improvements—like a juvenile department, special library alcoves, access to shelves, and cases for models, collections, curios and gifts—would meet with approval and use. It is no unusual thing now for a resident to bring to our desk an illustrated account of the opening of a fine library in some other town and say, "This is what we ought to have here."

Will not somebody do for Concord what Mr. Frank P. Carpenter is doing for Manchester? Picture to yourselves how a suitable city library, situated on Green Street at the head of Park, would complete our handsome square and make the capital more noteworthy for its group of public buildings. Ought it not to strike a rich man as a good investment—this putting his money into what will add to his own and his town's reputation and serve as a "continuation school" for everybody?

But to consider, not what is Croesus's duty, but the library's, I think its present resources should be more widely known, and that it would be well to spend a small sum in bringing this about. Hereafter we shall advertise. We may even boast! We want to reduce the number of those who say, "Why, I did not suppose you had anything on this subject."

In an institution of our unpretentious and popular character it is not undignified but sensible to call attention to the helpful material it contains. If we purchase the Loose-leaf Encyclopædia we shall want the fact known to every man who is alive enough to desire latest information. If we put in the International Library of Technology, the volumes should be made to reach not only the Manual Training School boys but all artisans and mechanics. If we buy the books listed in Grange reading courses, all our farmers must be made aware of it. We ought to ask the daily papers to publish more news about the library, and when their space is exhausted, to have lists printed in other ways and to mail them broadcast.

My answer to agents frequently is, "Buy? Yes, if your books would get read."

And the agents reply that they hear of a wide-spread decrease in the patronage of reading-rooms. The fact that our evening customers have fallen off more than our day ones seems significant; the youth of the city who used to flock to the library after supper now prefer other forms of recreation, and choose a nickel show instead of a free book.

In our agencies and deposit stations also, there is noticeable this crowding out of the literary habit. I believe in organizing branches to a library because they are always keenly enjoyed and their advantages thoroughly realized by a few, and because they afford possibilities for the personal touch; but our latest essay in this direction, namely, the vacation branch maintained last summer in East Concord, was a disappointment. On one afternoon, seeing a half-dozen lads idling over part of a newspaper on the store steps with no intention of crossing the street to where our Branch was located, I selected six of the most alluring books for boys and took them to the group. They turned the pages but in fifteen minutes brought them back to our case, not enough interested to ask if they might take the stories home. And this incident might have happened in any ward besides No. 2.

A writer on our national psychology says:—

"The American people wants literature reduced to snappy paragraphs—culture in the form of capsules. There is a feeling that somehow we ought to have these things and we want to get through with them in as short order as possible. The American's pleasure is not in reading but in having read."

Certain it is that when one of our valued customers dies who has regularly taken out the Nineteenth Century, The Forum, the Popular Science Monthly, etc., etc., no other borrower steps into his place to call for the weightier periodicals.

Even the Shakespeare Room is no longer used by eight clubs, and the girls of the present will hardly meet there as women to read the author whom one young person of to-day dismissed with, "Yes, I've glanced through Shakespeare but I don't like the way it ends."

There seems a pictorial presentation of modern tendencies in a recent Woman's Home Companion. The full-page illustration is entitled, "If Bobby got everything he wanted for Christmas," and depicts a youngster opening his eyes on December 25th to find his dreams come true, and himself surrounded by everything he has longed for. All toys and engines, all pets and sporting goods, everything that can divert him on earth below or in the heavens above—for there is an airship in the collection,—is banked up beside his cot. But there is no book; and that its omission was probably unconscious on the artist's part makes it more striking. The little fellow has no hunger for a fairy story, a hero legend, or a tale of adventure. He wants to be doing something himself!

Perhaps it is such boys,—the Bobbys growing up without benefit of books,—who form the ungrateful and disorderly groups that weekly come to our reading room not to read but wilfully to strain the attendant's patience till it breaks and a policeman is sent for. This matter of bad conduct, Sunday afternoons, is our most annoying and immediate problem.

On the other hand, none are more welcome within the Library than another set of boys who have gained an admirable facility in consulting indexes and works of reference. What a bright class can do when directed by an excellent teacher who himself knows how to use a library, has been shown by the High School boys and girls now studying political economy. Doubtless many pupils in

Concord have already learned the truth of George Macdonald's saying, "As you grow ready for it, somewhere or other you will find what is needful for you in a book."

With the increasing interest felt by adults in social service, in questions of labor and capital, in practical subjects and vocational education, it would seem to be a city library's obligation to put within the public's reach the sanest works giving both sides of these issues of the day. If people are growing deaf to the Swan of Avon and are listening either in faith or curiosity to Steiner, Steffens, Dr. Grenfell, "Scientific" Taylor or Jane Addams, then this Library better not waste its energies in trying to create a literary renaissance by buying handsome editions of the classics, but rather provide that mental food which the civic body is in condition to assimilate.

It must not be inferred that the growth of indifference to library privileges is not offset by features which encourage us in our work: take the matter of circulation, for instance; we gave out only 326 fewer volumes than in 1910; probably 326 persons went last year, for best-sellers, to Gibson's subscription library. Further, instead of regretting the cessation of our Saturday night rushes, we might be glad that our work is more evenly distributed throughout the week. It is a fine record that with 91,338 books taken out in 1911, only two have been lost and not settled for. The long-time charge for books to be carried away during the summer vacation is a privilege in greater demand each year. Our worn-out stories have been wanted by local W. C. T. U. workers for the boxes being packed for lumbermen.

By means of continued membership in the Library Art Club our School Street hall is seldom without a display of photographs, and the cultivating influence of pictures is thus secured. I lately directed the attention of an intelligent patron to an array of especially fine views, and his answer was a reproachful, "I never missed one exhibit."

It may be permissible to bring out the fact that in a Library doing our amount of business it is exceptional for the librarian to be the cataloguing department; for seventeen years I have prepared every card for our drawers, latterly aided by buying for new non-fiction works the cards printed by the Library of Congress which require only slight preparation to make them ready for insertion in our catalogue.

The construction of our gallery was followed by the painting of all the inside walls in harmonious shades of brown, and by the purchase of a vacuum cleaner; when this has been thoroughly used, we shall take an inventory, a task long contemplated but rendered formidable by the accumulation of dirt on books and shelves.

Through the year there come many kind proofs that townspeople appreciate the faithful labors of the library assistants, but the extent of their duties I claim I alone can understand.

In conclusion, grateful acknowledgment is made to Concord's religious, municipal and philanthropic institutions which furnish their reports and publications, and to the citizens who have during 1911 given books or magazines; the list should be headed by the one who has for a quarter of a century turned over to the Library periodicals which she thinks ought to do the world good. To this name of Mrs. Armenia S. White are subjoined those of E. J. Aiken, D. E. Miller, P. R. Holden, Mrs. Barton P. Jenks, Mrs. Sophia Sanborn, Dr. Hoyt-Stevens, Mrs. H. H. Wright, Mrs. F. M. Reed of Penacook.

Respectfully submitted,

GRACE BLANCHARD,

Librarian.
